

BRIAN M. BOYNTON
Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General
Civil Division
JAMES G. TOUHEY, JR.
Director, Torts Branch
PHILIP D. MACWILLIAMS
Trial Attorney
D.C. Bar No. 482883
E-mail: phil.macwilliams@usdoj.gov
U.S. Department of Justice
Civil Division, Torts Branch
Benjamin Franklin Station, P.O. Box 888
Washington, DC 20044
Telephone: (202) 616-4285
Attorneys for the United States of America

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

C.M., on her own behalf and on behalf of her minor child, B.M.; L.G., on her own behalf and on behalf of her minor child, B.G.; M.R., on her own behalf and on behalf of her minor child, J.R.; O.A., on her own behalf and on behalf of her minor child, L.A.; and V.C., on her own behalf and on behalf of her minor child, G.A.,

Case No. 2:19-cv-05217-SRB

UNITED STATES' OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR
PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Plaintiffs,

V.

United States of America.

Defendant.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	1
BACKGROUND.....	2
A. STATUTORY BACKGROUND	2
B. THE POLICIES CHALLENGED IN THIS CASE	4
C. PLAINTIFFS' DETENTION AND SEPARATION.....	4
ARGUMENT	5
I. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY HAS NOT BEEN WAIVED FOR PLAINTIFFS' CLAIMS	5
A. Plaintiffs' Claims Are Impermissible Institutional or Systemic Tort Claims	5
B. Plaintiffs' Claims Are Barred by the Discretionary Function Exception	7
II. PLAINTIFFS CANNOT ESTABLISH CLAIMS FOR INTENTIONAL INFILCTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS UNDER APPLICABLE STATE LAW	17
A. Law Enforcement Privilege Prevents Plaintiffs from Establishing "Extreme and Outrageous" Behavior	17
B. Plaintiffs Have Not Established the Element of Intent	20
III. PLAINTIFFS CANNOT ESTABLISH CLAIMS FOR NEGLIGENCE	22
CONCLUSION.....	25

1 TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

2 Statutes:

3 6 U.S.C. § 279(a)	3
4 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(1)(A)	3
5 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(1)(C)	3
6 6 U.S.C. §§ 279(g)(2)	3
7 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)	3
8 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b).....	3
9 8 U.S.C. § 1226	3
10 8 U.S.C. § 1231	3
11 8 U.S.C. § 1232	3
12 8 U.S.C. § 1325	2, 4, 5, 6, 8
13 8 U.S.C. § 1326	3
14 8 U.S.C. § 1357.....	3
15 28 U.S.C. § 2680	2
16 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(2)(iii),.....	3
17 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4)(ii).....	3

15 Cases:

16 Alfrey v. United States , 276 F.3d 557 (9th Cir. 2002)	12
17 Barton v. Barr , 140 S. Ct. 1442 (2020)	2
18 Bell v. Wolfish , 441 U.S. 520 (1979)	12
19 Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc. , 366 F.3d 736 (9th Cir. 2004)	18
20 Calderon v. United States , 123 F.3d 947 951 (7th Cir. 1997)	12
21 Campos v. United States , 888 F.3d 724 (5th Cir. 2018)	16
22 Carrranza v. United States , No. 3:12-cv-02255, 2013 WL 3333104 (D. Or. July 1, 2013)	18
23 County of Sacramento v. Lewis , 523 U.S. 833 (1998)	23

1	Cruz v. United States , 684 F. Supp. 2d 217 (D.P.R. 2010)	16
2	Daurio v. Arizona Department of Child Safety , No. CV-18-03299, 2020 WL 6940812 (D. Ariz. Nov. 25, 2020)	24
3
4	Demetrulias v. Wal-Mart Stores Inc. , 917 F. Supp. 2d 993 (D. Ariz. 2013)	18
5
6	E.L.A. v. United States , No. 2:20-cv-1524, 2022 WL 2046135 (W.D. Wash. June 3, 2022)	23
7
8	FDIC v. Meyer , 510 U.S. 471 (1994)	24
9
10	Franklin Sav. Corp. v. United States , 180 F.3d 1124 (10th Cir. 1999)	9, 10, 11, 12
11
12	Gipson v. Kasey , 150 P.3d 228 (Ariz. 2007)	23
13
14	Guerrero v. United States , No. CV-12-00370, 2012 WL 12842348 (D. Ariz. Dec. 19, 2012)	12
15
16	Harris v. United States , No. CV-19-0024, 2021 WL 2334385 (D. Ariz. June 8, 2021)	25
17
18	Harrison v. Fed. Bureau of Prisons , 464 F. Supp. 2d 552 (E.D. Va. 2006)	17
19
20	Johnson v. McDonald , 3 P.3d 1075 (Ariz. 1995)	17
21
22	Kajtazi v. Kajtazi , 488 F. Supp. 15 (E.D.N.Y. 1978)	18
23
24	Keates v. Koile , 883 F.3d 1228 (9th Cir. 2018)	24
25
26	Lerner v. John Hancock Life Ins. , No. cv-09-01933, 2011 WL 13185713 (D. Ariz. Mar. 21, 2011)	17
27
28	Lewis v. Dirt Sports LLC , 259 F. Supp. 3d 1039 (D. Ariz. 2017)	23
24	Matson v. Safeway , No. 12-8206, 2013 WL 6628257 (D. Ariz. Dec. 17, 2013)	18
25
26	Mintz v. Bell Atl. Sys. Leasing Intern., Inc. , 905 P.2d 550 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995)	17
27
28

1	Mitchell v. United States , 149 F. Supp. 2d 1111(D. Ariz. 1999)	12
2	Nurse v. United States , 226 F.3d 996 (9th Cir. 2000)	12
3	Pankratz v. Willis , 744 P.2d 1182 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1987)	18
4	Pereyra v. United States , No. CV 03-267, 2008 WL 11394371 (D. Ariz. Sept. 26, 2008)	13
5	Petty v. Arizona , No. CV-15-0133, 2018 WL 2220665 (D. Ariz. May 15, 2018)	24-25
6	Ramirez v. Glendale Union High Sch. Dist. No. 205 , No. 03-0060, 2006 WL 8439630 (D. Ariz. Sept. 20, 2006)	24
7	S.E.B.M. v. United States , No. 1:21-cv-00095, 2023 WL 2383784 --- F. Supp. 3d --- 2023	16, 20, 25
8	Savage v. Boise , 272 P.2d 349 (Ariz. 1954)	17, 18
9	Sloan v. H.U.D. , 236 F.3d 756 (D.C. Cir. 2001)	16
10	U.S. v. Gaubert , 499 U.S. 315 (1991)	9
11	Washington v. Reno , 35 F.3d 1093 (6th Cir. 1994)	17
12	Watts v. Golden Age Nursing Home , 127 Ariz. 255 (1980)	17

20 Restatements:

21	Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46, comment g	17, 18, 21
----	--	------------

1 INTRODUCTION

2 In May of 2018, Plaintiffs – five adults and their children – were apprehended for 3 unlawfully crossing the Southwest Border of the United States between ports of entry. The 4 adults and children were separated pursuant to the Department of Homeland Security
 5 (“DHS”) referral policy—which directed U.S. Border Patrol Sectors along the Southwest
 6 Border, to the extent practicable, to refer for prosecution all amenable adults regardless of 7 family unit status—and ICE’s existing statutory authority to detain adult noncitizens
 8 through their removal proceedings.

9 President Biden has denounced the prior practice of separating children from their 10 families at the United States-Mexico border, and the United States does not defend that 11 policy here. But Plaintiffs filed this action under the Federal Tort Claims Act (“FTCA”),
 12 seeking monetary damages from the United States, arguing that the federal policy decisions
 13 and conduct that resulted in their separations constituted actionable torts under Arizona
 14 law. Plaintiffs now move for partial summary judgment (“Pls MSJ”) on certain elements
 15 of their claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”) and negligence.
 16 ECF Nos. 378,379. With respect to their claim for IIED, Plaintiffs first contend they have 17 established as a matter of law that the government’s conduct was “extreme and 18 outrageous” based on the decision to separate the adult Plaintiffs and their children, Pls.
 19 MSJ 18, and the conduct during the separation, including the amount of time that the adult
 20 Plaintiffs and their children had to say goodbye, how quickly the adult Plaintiffs were 21 provided with the location within the Department of Health and Human Services’ Office of 22 Refugee Resettlement (“ORR”) custody to which their children would be transferred, how 23 often the parents and children communicated while in separate custody, and that Plaintiffs 24 and their children were not reunified until required by court order. Pls. MSJ 19-21.
 25 Second, Plaintiffs argue that they have established that the government recklessly 26 disregarded the near certainty of severe emotional distress because it was aware that 27 separations could cause emotional distress but nevertheless adopted the DHS Referral
 28 Policy. Pls. MSJ 21-23. And with respect to their negligence claims, Plaintiffs assert that

1 the government owed a duty of care to them while they were in federal custody and 2 breached that duty largely on the same grounds that form the basis for their IIED claims.
 3 Pls. MSJ 23-25.

4 Plaintiffs fall short of the showing needed to grant summary judgment in their 5 favor. Plaintiffs' arguments principally rest on facts which the United States disputes and 6 which, in any event, are not material to their claims. Even if these facts are accepted,
 7 though, as the United States explained in its motion for summary judgment ("U.S. MSJ")
 8 and statement of facts in support ("U.S. MSJ SOF"), the Court lacks jurisdiction because:
 9 (1) Plaintiffs' claims for institutional or systematic torts are not cognizable under the 10 FTCA; and (2) Plaintiffs' claims are barred by the FTCA's discretionary function
 11 exception, 28 U.S.C. § 2680(a). ECF Nos. 371, 372. Nor can such disputed facts
 12 overcome the privileges under applicable State law that preclude liability for Plaintiffs'
 13 claims. Moreover, the asserted facts do not establish the elements of the tort claims 14 brought by Plaintiffs, and thus are not legally sufficient to grant judgment as a matter of 15 law for Plaintiffs. Accordingly, summary judgment for Plaintiffs must be denied.

BACKGROUND

A. Statutory Background

When a noncitizen enters the United States between official ports of entry, he or she may be prosecuted for criminal immigration violations, including entering the United States "at any time or place other than as designated by immigration officers" and eluding "examination or inspection by immigration officers."¹ 8 U.S.C. § 1325(a). Section 1325(a) is a misdemeanor that is punishable by a fine and "imprison[ment] not more than 6 months" for a first infraction. A subsequent violation is a felony and may result in imprisonment of not more than two years. Id. Additionally, a noncitizen who has previously been removed and unlawfully re-enters the United States can be prosecuted for ¹ This brief uses the term "noncitizen" as equivalent to the statutory term "alien." See Barton v. Barr, 140 S. Ct. 1442, 1446 n.2 (2020) (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(3)).

1 a violation of 8 U.S.C § 1326, which is a felony and carries a potential term of 2 imprisonment of up to two years. Violations of these federal criminal immigration statutes
 3 are prosecuted by the U.S. Attorneys' Offices, which are offices within the U.S.
 4 Department of Justice.

5 Noncitizens arriving in or present in the United States who, following inspection,
 6 are deemed inadmissible are subject to removal from the United States and subject to 7 detention during the pendency of their removal proceedings. See id. §§ 1225(b); 1226;
 8 1357. Further, noncitizens with final orders of removal are subject to detention pursuant to 9 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a). DHS possesses statutory authority to "arrange for appropriate places
 10 of detention for aliens detained pending removal or a decision on removal." 8 U.S.C.
 11 § 1231(g)(1). In some cases, DHS may exercise its discretion to release a noncitizen from 12 custody. See, e.g., id. §§ 1182(d)(5), 1226(a)(2). Those determinations are made on a 13 "case-by-case basis" pursuant to federal statutory and regulatory authorities. Id.
 14 § 1182(d)(5); 8 C.F.R. §§ 235.3(b)(2)(iii), (b)(4)(ii).

15 When an agency takes custody of a noncitizen child for whom "there is no parent or 16 legal guardian in the United States [or] no parent or legal guardian in the United States is 17 available to provide care and physical custody," 6 U.S.C. § 279(g)(2), the agency must 18 designate that child as an "unaccompanied alien child" ("UAC") pursuant to the 19 Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 ("TVPRA"), and transfer
 20 custody of the child to ORR. *Id.*²

21 ² ORR has responsibility for "the care and placement of unaccompanied alien 22 children who are in federal custody by reason of their immigration status." 6 U.S.C. §§
 23 279(a), (b)(1)(A), (b)(1)(C); see also 8 U.S.C. § 1232(b)(1). The term "UAC" is defined as 24 a child who: (1) "has no lawful immigration status in the United States"; (2) "has not 25 attained 18 years of age"; and (3) "with respect to whom...there is no parent or legal 26 guardian in the United States [or] no parent or legal guardian in the United States is 27 available to provide care and physical custody." 6 U.S.C. § 279(g)(2). Under the TVPRA, 28 any federal agency shall "transfer the custody of such child to [ORR] not later than 72 hours after determining that such child is" a UAC except in the case of exceptional circumstances. 8 U.S.C. § 1232(b)(3). ORR seeks to place UACs "in the least restrictive setting that is in the best interest of the child." Id. § 1232(c)(2)(A). ORR "shall not release such children upon their own recognizance." 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(2). Once a minor is in ORR custody, statutory and regulatory provisions govern release of the minor to an approved sponsor. See 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(3).

1 B. The Policies Challenged in this Case

2 On April 6, 2018, Attorney General Jefferson Sessions issued a memorandum that 3 directed “each United States Attorney’s Office along the Southwest Border—to the extent
 4 practicable, and in consultation with DHS—to adopt immediately a zero tolerance policy
 5 for all offenses referred for prosecution under” 8 U.S.C. § 1325(a), which prohibits
 6 unlawful entry into the United States. U.S. MSJ SOF 5. About two weeks later, in a 7 memorandum titled “Increasing Prosecutions of Immigration Violations,” senior officials
 8 at DHS proposed three prosecution referral policy options to the Secretary of Homeland
 9 Security (the “DHS Referral Memorandum”). U.S. MSJ SOF 6. On May 4, 2018,
 10 Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen approved Option 3 in the DHS Referral Memorandum, initiating
 11 a policy of referring for prosecution, to the extent practicable, all adults who unlawfully 12 crossed the Southwest border of the United States, “including those initially arriving with 13 minors” (“the DHS Referral Policy”). U.S. MSJ SOF 15.

14 C. Plaintiffs’ Detention and Separation

15 Plaintiffs—five adult noncitizens and their respective children—were apprehended
 16 in the U.S. Border Patrol’s Yuma Sector in Arizona in May 2018 and transported to the 17 Yuma Border Patrol Station.³ U.S. MSJ SOF 44, 62, 79, 97, 115. Pursuant to the DHS 18 Referral Policy in effect at the time, Border Patrol agents identified the adult Plaintiffs as 19 amenable to prosecution because they had entered the United States unlawfully and 20 initiated the prosecution referral process for the adult Plaintiffs for violations of § 1325.
 21 U.S. SOF 45, 63, 80, 98, 116. Based on Border Patrol’s decision to initiate the 22 prosecution referral process for the adult Plaintiffs, the minor Plaintiffs were designated as 23 UACs, and accordingly, Border Patrol agents requested placement of the minors with 24 ORR. Id. After Border Patrol agents completed processing of the adult Plaintiffs and the 25 criminal referral processes concluded, the adult Plaintiffs were transferred to the custody

26 ³ U.S. Border Patrol is a component of U.S. Customs and Border Protection 27 (“CBP”), which is an agency within DHS. Border Patrol possesses responsibility for 28 apprehending individuals who enter the United States between ports of entry. Its geographic areas of responsibility along the Southwest Border are divided into several sectors. Border Patrol’s Yuma Sector encompasses parts of Arizona and California.

1 of ICE as single adults for a custody determination pending removal proceedings.⁴ U.S.
 2 MSJ SOF 56,74,91, 109, 126. The adult Plaintiffs were not prosecuted and remained in 3 ICE custody until they were reunified with their children. U.S. MSJ SOF 54, 56,72,74,87, 4 91, 105,109, 126.

ARGUMENT

I. Sovereign Immunity Has Not Been Waived For Plaintiffs' Claims

7 Plaintiffs are not entitled to partial summary judgment because the Court lacks
 8 jurisdiction over their claims. While the current Administration does not defend the 9 wisdom of the policy choices made by the prior Administration that led to the separation
 10 of families at the United States-Mexico border, the FTCA does not permit recovery in tort 11 for harms that arise from federal policy decisions. Any other outcome would contravene 12 the text and purpose of the FTCA and threaten to expose the federal government and, in 13 turn, the public fisc to monetary damages for myriad policies.

A. Plaintiffs' Claims Are Impermissible Institutional or Systemic Tort Claims

14 As explained in the United States' motion for summary judgment, Plaintiffs' claims
 15 are not cognizable under the FTCA because they are "institutional" or "systemic" claims
 16 which seek to hold the United States liable based on the conduct of an agency or the 17 government as a whole. U.S. MSJ 5-8. The FTCA, however, waives sovereign immunity 18 only for the wrongful acts of individual employees of the government acting within the 19 scope of their employment and does not render the United States liable for the action of an
 20 agency or the government as a whole.⁵

22 ⁴ ICE also is an agency within DHS. ICE's Enforcement & Removal Operations, 23 among other things, is authorized to take custody of noncitizens following their 24 apprehension by Border Patrol and to make a determination as to whether to detain or release the noncitizen during the pendency of his or her removal proceeding.

25 ⁵ Id. (citing Meier v. United States, 2006 WL 3798160, at *3-4 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 22, 26 2006) (dismissing claim based on corporate negligence theory), aff'd, 310 F. App'x 976
 27 (9th Cir. 2009); Lee v. United States, 2020 WL 6573258 at *6 (D. Ariz. Sept. 18, 2020)
 cognizable FTCA claim must be predicated on the tortious misconduct of individual

1 Plaintiffs' motion for partial summary judgment underscores that their claims are 2 impermissible institutional or systemic tort claims. Throughout their brief Plaintiffs 3 repeatedly focus on what they characterize as reckless or negligent aspects of "the 4 government's" policy-making process that resulted in the DHS Referral Policy as well as 5 challenge the policy itself. See, e.g., Pls. MSJ 3-10, 16-25. Specifically, Plaintiffs seek to 6 hold the United States liable for "the government's" decision to adopt a prosecution
 7 referral policy that would result in the separation of parents and children "without notifying
 8 key officials it was coming", Pls. MSJ at 7, and "without a plan that would ensure that 9 families, including Plaintiffs, received information about their family members'
 10 whereabouts and regularly communicated while separated."), id. at 18; see also id. at 8 11 ("The government also implemented the Policy without developing a tracking system that 12 would allow parents to locate their children and facilitate regular communication, and 13 without a plan to ensure reunification.") (emphasis added); id. at 10 ("Despite these obvious
 14 flaws in implementation, the government continued to separate families[.]") (emphasis 15 added).⁶

16 In other words, Plaintiffs seek to hold the United States liable under the FTCA for 17 the conduct of "the government" in allegedly recklessly or negligently designing and 18 implementing an agencywide policy.⁷ But that is precisely the sort of institutional conduct 19 that does not give rise to liability under the FTCA.

20 government employees, rather than on alleged wrongdoing by the United States or its 21 agencies writ large."); B.A.D.J. v. United States, No. CV-21-00215, 2022 WL 11631016
 22 *5 (D. Ariz. Sept. 30, 2022) ("To the extent Plaintiffs allege harms resulting from 23 policymaking or agency-wide misconduct, the Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction 24 over those claims.").

25 ⁶ See also Pls. MSJ at 15 ("the government acted in an extreme and outrageous 26 manner by . . . adopting a policy under which migrant parents and children would be 27 separated for months or years[.]") (emphasis added); id. at 17 (basing IIED claim on "the 28 government's conduct in adopting and implementing the DHS Referral Policy") (emphasis added); id. at 19 ("The government implemented the Policy without a plan to reunify families.") (emphasis added)

⁷ Although Plaintiffs make passing reference to their allegation that "the government" separated families intending to cause distress, Pls. MSJ 2 n.1, 8 n.5, they expressly state that they are not basing their motion for partial summary judgment on such a theory and do not proffer any statement of material fact to support such a theory.

1 B. Plaintiffs' Claims Are Barred by the Discretionary Function Exception

2 As explained in the United States' motion for summary judgment, the FTCA's
 3 discretionary function exception ("DFE") also bars Plaintiffs' claims because they 4 challenge policy-based discretionary determinations that resulted in the placement of 5 Plaintiffs and their children in separate custody, as well as the continued detention of the 6 adult Plaintiffs in ICE custody pending their immigration removal proceedings. See U.S.
 7 MSJ 8-26.⁸ Plaintiffs' partial motion for summary judgment further underscores that their 8 claims arise from conduct that falls squarely within the DFE.

9 1. Plaintiffs' Challenges to Prosecution Referrals Pursuant to the DHS 10 Referral Policy and the Placement of Children with ORR Are 11 Barred by the DFE

12 Plaintiffs acknowledge that they were separated as a result of enforcement action
 13 taken pursuant to the DHS Referral Policy. Pls. MSJ 10-14. The adoption and case-by-14 case implementation of the DHS Referral Policy involved the exercise of the sort of 15 quintessential policy-based discretion that is protected by the DFE. U.S. MSJ 10-17. In 16 particular, the decisions whether and when to pursue referral for prosecution of an 17 amenable adult, and when to seek an ORR placement for a child when a parent was to be 18 processed for a prosecution referral, are policy-based discretionary decisions. See U.S.
 19 MSJ 15-17.

20 Plaintiffs cannot avoid the DFE simply because the adult Plaintiffs ultimately were 21 not prosecuted by the U.S. Attorney's Office. See Pls. MSJ 8, 18. The decision of the 22 Yuma Sector Prosecutions Unit to refer a case for prosecution to the U.S. Attorney's Office
 23 is protected by the DFE, even if Prosecution Unit agents believed a referral could result in 24 a declination of prosecution by the U.S. Attorney's Office. U.S. MSJ 13-16. That the U.S.

25 In any event, the record evidence does not support the allegation that the relevant 26 decisionmaker, Secretary Nielsen, acted with such an intent. See U.S. MSJ 10-12, 17-20, 27 23-26; U.S. MSJ SOF 18, 19.

28 ⁸ The test for application of the DFE is set forth in the United States' motion for 29 summary judgment. U.S. MSJ 8-9. For the sake of brevity, and because the court is 30 already familiar with the DFE through the United States' motion for summary judgment
 31 and other filings, the United States references and incorporates that analysis here in lieu 32 of repeating it.

1 Attorney's Office might ultimately use its prosecutorial discretion and decline to pursue a
 2 particular case based on its own policy-based judgment does not mean the Border Patrol's
 3 referral decision was not susceptible to policy considerations. Id.; U.S. Supp. SOF 9.
 4 Indeed, the U.S. Attorney's Office testified that the Yuma Sector Prosecutions Unit acted
 5 in "good faith" in submitting prosecution referrals to the U.S. Attorney's Office for their
 6 review and consideration even where a case could result in declination. U.S. Supp. SOF
 7 10; U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 12 (USAO 30(b)(6) 222).⁹

8 In any event, Plaintiffs incorrectly focus on the final referral decisions, made by the 9 Yuma Sector Prosecutions Unit. As the United States explained, as soon as possible
 10 following a noncitizen adult's apprehension and intake into the Yuma Border Patrol
 11 Station, Border Patrol agents with a different unit—the Yuma Station Processing, 12 Screening and Transportation Unit ("PST Unit")—would determine if the adult was 13 amenable to prosecution and to be processed for a referral for prosecution. U.S. MSJ SOF
 14 34-38; U.S. MSJ Ex. D (Jordan Decl. at ¶ 11); see also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 179-15 183). Following that determination, Yuma Station PST Unit Border Patrol agents would, 16 as soon as practicable, seek an ORR placement for any child accompanying an adult
 17 amenable to prosecution. Id. PST Unit agents would then continue further processing of 18 the adult and any minor in custody. Id. Only after completion of processing of the adult
 19 would his or her case file be transferred to the Yuma Sector Prosecutions Unit, which was 20 responsible for ultimately preparing and making the actual referral to the U.S. Attorney's 21 Office. Id. Thus, Plaintiffs focus on the decision by a separate unit (the Yuma Sector 22 Prosecutions Unit) relating to whether to refer a case to the U.S. Attorney's Office, but that

23 ⁹ The referrals reflected the understanding that prosecuting § 1325 violations by all
 24 noncitizens was a priority of the Department of Justice. U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan
 25 59, 114, 137-138) (Special Operations Supervisor for the Yuma Border Patrol Station's 26 PST Unit, testifying it was his understanding that "the Attorney General issued a 27 directive that the US Attorney[']s Office would accept all cases for illegal entry," that "it was our understanding as an agency that this was a prosecution priority for the Department of Justice and the US Attorney[']s Office," and that "we intended to make a referral on all these adults that we did separate."); id. at 130 ("At the time that we declare the child a UAC, we had every intention of prosecuting -- or referring that individual for prosecution"); U.S. Supp. SOF 7, 8.

1 referral decision occurred after the prior discretionary decision by agents in the Yuma
 2 Station PST Unit to make an ORR placement request.

3 The manner in which the Yuma Sector structured its screening and referral process
 4 involved the exercise of discretion that implicated the constraints and exigencies associated 5 with noncitizens, particularly minors, in custody. U.S. MSJ 13-16.¹⁰ In particular, time
 6 constraints arose not only from the TVPRA, but also from the Flores Settlement
 7 Agreement, which calls for the transfers of minors out of Border Patrol custody “as 8 expeditiously as possible.” See U.S. MSJ 15-16 & n.14; see also U.S. MSJ Ex. A Att. 1
 9 (McAleenan 67-68) (“it was really ingrained in [Border Patrol] operations that the 10 placement of a child and ensuring that an unaccompanied child spend as little time as 11 possible, ideally within 24 hours, is placed and transported to a better custodial setting.”); 12 U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 184-189) (Border Patrol operated under “direction that we

13

14 ¹⁰ See also U.S. MSJ Ex. A Att. 1 (McAleenan 291) (“The imperative, once a 15 decision is made to refer for prosecution, is that the child get a placement to be in a better
 16 custodial situation than in a border patrol station.”); U.S. MSJ Ex. A Att. 4 (Vitiello 170) 17 (explaining that a separation could occur even if the prosecution of the parent was 18 declined, because a referral to ORR would have been made “because the parent was on 19 the workflow toward 1325 prosecution”). While Plaintiffs claim that the separations 20 occurred as a result of recklessness or negligence, they make a passing reference to 21 efforts to prosecute as merely “pretext” to bring about a separation. Pls. MSJ 9 n.4. As 22 the United States has explained, however, the discretionary function exception does not 23 permit inquiry into a decisionmaker’s subjective intent. See U.S. v. Gaubert, 499 U.S. 315, 24 325 (1991); Franklin Sav. Corp. v. United States, 180 F.3d 1124, 1127 (10th Cir. 1999).
 25 And to the extent the intent of any decisionmaker is relevant, Plaintiffs have not adduced
 26 evidence that Secretary Nielsen—the official who approved the DHS Referral Policy—
 27 adopted the policy as a pretext to bring about separations. Moreover, the record evidence
 28 demonstrates that the timing of seeking placement with ORR when the DHS Referral
 Policy was in effect was consistent with pre-existing Border Patrol practice. See U.S.
 MSJ 15-16, U.S. MSJ SOF 27; see also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 13 (Hastings 146-47) (when asked who made the decision that a parent who is designated as amenable to prosecution was unavailable and that the children would then be treated as UACs, Chief Hastings testified “It’s policy even prior to this time frame.”); U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 110-
 111) (when asked about the timing of ORR placement requests in May 2018, Agent Jordan testified that it “worked as it always had. So any minors that were deemed to be unaccompanied were referred to the Office of Refugee Resettlement as soon as practical.”); U.S. Supp. SOF 12, 13. Indeed, in situations in the Yuma Sector prior to the DHS Referral Policy where an adult member of a family unit was identified to be processed for a prosecution referral, the same process existed whereby an ORR placement request was made as soon as practicable following the decision to process that adult for a referral for prosecution. See also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 52-53, 55-56); U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 6 (Comella 374-380). U.S. Supp. SOF 12, 13.

1 should always strive to have juveniles out of our custody within 24 hours.”).¹¹ The relative
 2 geographic remoteness of the Yuma Sector “added extra layers of logistics and planning”
 3 in transferring minors out of Border Patrol custody. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan
 4 122-123); U.S. Supp. SOF 13.

5 Border Patrol officials testified that they understood that delaying an ORR
 6 placement request and transfer of a child until after the U.S. Attorney’s Office reached a 7 decision—or even later once a prosecution is completed—would affect children’s welfare
 8 and Border Patrol operations. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 122-133; 187-194); U.S.
 9 *Supp. SOF 13.*¹² The Border Patrol stations were “built and designed in a different era” in 10 which single males were the predominant demographic encountered and were not intended 11 for detention of children. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A. Att. 5 (Jordan 187-188); U.S. Supp. SOF 4.
 12 Accordingly, the evidence indicates that the “[Border Patrol had] always strived to get the 13 children through [its] facilities and get them to an age-appropriate facility as soon as 14 practical.” Id. Moreover, because Border Patrol stations must operate around the clock, 15 while U.S. Attorneys’ Offices and courts do not, the Border Patrol considered that an 16 additional build-up of detainees in the Border Patrol station would occur should ORR
 17 placements be delayed, and that additional time of children in its custody would pull 18 resources away from frontline enforcement duties. See id. at 190-91; U.S. Supp. SOF 13.
 19 Border Patrol officials testified that they believed that the need to expeditiously transfer a 20 minor out of Border Patrol custody was especially acute in the May 2018 time period given

21 ¹¹ The TVPRA requires that a UAC be transferred to ORR custody within 72 hours,
 22 which for operational reasons was treated as running from the time the child determined
 23 to be a UAC was apprehended. See U.S. MSJ 16 n.14; U.S. MSJ Ex. A Att. 1
(McAleenan 67); see also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 126, 186) (the time in Border Patrol custody of a minor designated as a UAC is determined to begin running at time of apprehension). U.S. Supp. SOF 13.

24 ¹² See also U.S. MSJ Ex. A Att. 3 (Hastings 306-307) (due to time constraints
 25 imposed by the TVPRA, Border Patrol agents could not delay seeking an ORR placement
 26 until after the U.S. Attorney’s office made a decision on whether to accept a prosecution 27 referral); U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 127) (“we would not know what the results of the prosecution would be in a timely enough manner for us to move the children out”); U.S.
 Supp. SOF 13.

the high and irregular volume of migrants unlawfully crossing the border, especially in the Yuma Sector. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 128-129) (testifying that it “was not practical for us to wait on the pendency of the US Attorney’s Office and their decision to prosecute based on the amount of juveniles that we had in custody and just the overall volume of detainees that we had in our station at that time”); U.S. Supp. SOF 13, 14.¹³ During this time, the Yuma Sector on average had close to 400 detainees in custody each day, with spikes of additional detainees (sometimes 100 or more) resulting from additional apprehensions. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 40, 194-200); U.S. Opp. Ex. C; U.S. Supp. SOF 13, 14. This high volume of detainees and large fluctuations created major challenges for scheduling, resource allocation, and the “need to adequately staff the border to deal with [Border Patrol’s] primary enforcement mission of protecting the border and ensuring homeland security.” Id. at 200-201; see also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 203-204) (“[D]elaying the movement of those juveniles would have only exacerbated the already strained conditions that we were dealing with . . . and would have negatively impacted our ability to enforce the immigration laws and protect the border.”); U.S. Supp. SOF 13, 14.¹⁴ Border Patrol officials also testified that it was difficult to delay the decision to make an ORR placement until a prosecution was accepted and completed because the ¹³ Border Patrol Chief Hastings testified that during the Spring of 2018 the Border Patrol Sectors across the Southwest Border were experiencing a very high volume of noncitizens' apprehension, and that the need to make a placement request with ORR as quickly as possible was especially urgent in May 2018 given the high volume of noncitizens apprehended during that time frame. U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 13 (Hastings 101-102, 134). A supervisory agent in the PST Unit described the Yuma Border Patrol Station as "overwhelmed" due to the volume of noncitizens being apprehended and transferred to the station, with no ability to control the volume and timing of noncitizens unlawfully crossing the border. U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 6 (Comella 394, 413-414). U.S. Supp. SOF 13, 14.

¹⁴ See also U.S. Opp. Ex. A. Att. 5 (Jordan 181) (In “May of 2018, we were dealing with capacity issues and ever changing amounts of people coming into our facility . . . and they strained the detention resources that we had, the enforcement resources that we had, and required us to pull frontline manpower into the processing area to deal with custody and care of all the juveniles that we had in custody and all the detainees that were currently being processed.”). U.S. Supp. SOF 13, 14.

1 defendant's initial appearance might need to be held over and the defendant might be held
 2 over for trial if there was not a guilty plea. Id. at 192-194. U.S. Supp. SOF 13.¹⁵

3 In sum, Border Patrol made a discretionary decision not to delay the placement of 4 minors, and this decision was susceptible to policy considerations. Id.

5 2. Plaintiffs' Challenge to Border Patrol's Custodial and Detainee
 6 Movement Decisions in a Secure Setting Is Barred by the DFE

7 Plaintiffs also seek to hold the United States liable for the manner in which 8 separations were effectuated and the allegedly limited information provided by Border
 9 Patrol agents regarding the ultimate destinations of the minors. Pls. MSJ 20-21.¹⁶

10 Courts have consistently held that operations in a secure custodial setting, including 11 decisions when, where, and how to move detainees, are protected by the DFE.¹⁷ Courts'

12 ¹⁵ See also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 12 (USAO 30(b)(6) 80-82) (testifying to various 13 reasons an initial appearance could be delayed or held over). U.S. Supp. SOF 13.

14 ¹⁶ As set forth in the Statement of Facts in Opposition, during processing, parents
 15 would be told that their children were going to be transferred to different facilities. See 16 U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 1 (McAleenan 149); U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 6 (Comella 203-208).
 17 U.S. Supp. SOF 3, 6. In fact, Plaintiffs' Statement of Facts establishes that they were told 18 that they would be transferred to separate custodial facilities, and parents and children
 19 were held together in Border Patrol custody prior to the time of transfer. See Pls. SOF
 20 58, 59, 62, 72, 73, 75, 86, 100,113.

21 Additionally, in their motion, Plaintiffs assert that the agents involved in their 22 processing and/or transfers did not receive training relating to separations. Pls. MSJ 7.
 23 Although it is unclear whether Plaintiffs include this alleged lack of training as a basis for 24 their claims, the United States disputes this assertion. See U.S. Contr. SOF 31.
 25 Nevertheless, any claim based on the training of Border Patrol agents is barred by the 26 DFE. See Nurse v. United States, 226 F.3d 996, 1001 (9th Cir. 2000) ("negligent and 27 reckless employment, supervision and training of the [Federal employees] . . . fall
 28 squarely within the discretionary function exception"); Guerrero v. United States, No.
 29 CV-12-00370, 2012 WL 12842348, *3 (D. Ariz. Dec. 19, 2012) (claim based upon 30 negligent training of Border Patrol agents barred by DFE because "a law enforcement
 31 agency's training and supervision of its officers involves substantial policy 32 considerations.").

33 ¹⁷ See Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520, 547–48 (1979) (prison administrators 34 afforded wide-ranging deference in adopting and executing policies and practices that in 35 their judgment are needed to preserve internal discipline and maintain institutional
 36 security); Alfrey v. United States, 276 F.3d 557, 565 (9th Cir.2002) (decisions relating to 37 detainee movements and security protected by DFE); Mitchell v. United States, 149 F.
 38 Supp. 2d 1111, 1114–15 (D. Ariz. 1999) (day-to-day detention-related decisions 39 protected by DFE), aff'd, 20 Fed. Appx. 636 (9th Cir. 2001); see also Calderon v. United 40 States, 123 F.3d 947, 951 (7th Cir. 1997) (balancing of security with rights of detainees 41 to socialize is decision protected by DFE).

1 unwillingness to second-guess physical movement and other custodial decisions in secure
2 settings extends to Border Patrol stations, given the myriad security and logistical
3 challenges of the environment and the competing priorities of agents assigned to functions
4 relating to processing, care, and transportation of detainees. See Pereyra v. United States, 5 No. CV 03-267, 2008 WL 11394371, *7 (D. Ariz. Sept. 26, 2008) (lawsuit arising out of 6 care and monitoring of detainee while in Border Patrol custody barred by DFE because it
7 was susceptible to various considerations including “manpower considerations” and 8 “logistics”).

9 The alleged acts and omissions occurring in the Yuma Border Patrol Station must 10 be viewed in the context in which they occurred. This context included complex and 11 logically challenging functions relating to processing, detainee care and custody
12 management, and detainee movements within and out of a Border Patrol station. See U.S.
13 Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 84-85) (testifying to the need for multiple agents to perform 14 various tasks relating to processing and detainee movement); U.S. Supp. SOF 15. Further, 15 the Border Patrol station was dealing with a large number of detainees of various 16 demographics who all needed to be processed, cared for, and transported out of custody as 17 quickly as possible, all while responding to the continual surge of additional detainees
18 being transported to and booked into the station and while still attempting to provide 19 sufficient resources to front-line border enforcement. See supra at 10-11; see also U.S.
20 Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 80) (testifying that the Yuma Station had a limited number of 21 agents to “accomplish processing everyone that was there and moving them out as 22 expeditiously as possible”); id. at 145 (testifying that the systems and processes in place in 23 Yuma were “to promote the efficiency and economy of the Government and move people
24 through [the] facilities in as timely manner as efficiently as possible, all while balancing 25 the challenges of maintaining border security at the same time.”); U.S. Supp. SOF 13, 14, 26 15. The manner in which the separations occurred necessarily are susceptible to these 27 policy considerations.

1 Plaintiffs also state that in the Yuma Sector if a prosecution of a parent was declined
2 or completed and their child remained in Border Patrol custody, Border Agents would not 3 seek to reunify the parent and child. Ps. MSJ 8. This is not material to Plaintiffs' claims, as 4 their children were transferred from Border Patrol custody prior to their prosecutions being
5 declined. U.S. MSJ SOF 49, 69, 84, 104, 120. In any event, for these same reasons stated
6 above, the DFE bars challenge to the decision whether to reunify and reprocess a parent
7 and child as a family unit if a child was still present in the Border Patrol station after 8 prosecution of the adult was declined or the sentence was completed. As explained in the 9 United States' motion for summary judgment, that decision was left to the policy-based 10 discretion of the Border Patrol agents in the station. See U.S. MSJ 15 n.12; U.S. MSJ Ex.
11 A Att. 1 (McAleenan 94-95, 222, 293). Such a scenario was a "rare occurrence" at the 12 Yuma Station and thus the Yuma Station did not create a process for identifying when it
13 occurred and how to address it. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 174-175); U.S. Supp.
14 SOF 16. There is no doubt that agency officials and operators in the field could have 15 reasonably concluded that, under certain circumstances, the best approach would have been 16 to reunite the parent and child, rather than proceed with the transfer of the child to ORR
17 custody. But the decision not to create a process for that scenario was a policy decision: it 18 involved balancing its relative infrequency with the amount of time and resources it would 19 require for agents to review the system of records to identify any such instances and to 20 reprocess the parent and child as a family unit and extend their time in Border Patrol
21 custody while awaiting transportation. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 206-210); see also U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 5 (Jordan 209-210) (additional time in custody "would have only 22 slowed down the processing and the through-put on all the new individuals that were 23 coming back and would have had second and third order effects there where it just 24 compounded the amount of time that everyone that followed them was held in custody");
25 U.S. Supp. SOF 16. Accordingly, this decision reflected a discretionary determination that 26 was susceptible to policy analysis.

1 3. Plaintiffs' Challenge to the Planning and Preparation for the DHS
2 Referral Policy Is Barred by the DFE

3 Plaintiffs also assert that “the government’s” planning for increased enforcement
4 actions pursuant to the DHS Referral Policy was inadequate. Although Plaintiffs’ motion 5 raises a number of broad allegations regarding the government’s policies and how those 6 policies were applied to thousands of individuals during the zero-tolerance-policy period,
7 Pls. MSJ 3-10, Plaintiffs’ claims must necessarily be limited to the government’s conduct
8 as it applied to only the Plaintiffs themselves.¹⁸ And the DFE bars Plaintiffs’ claims based 9 upon alleged inadequacies in planning for the implementation of the DHS Referral Policy,
10 including decisions regarding resources and staffing, and considerations of the sufficiency
11 of then-existing processes and systems to track families after separation. U.S. MSJ 12-13.

12 Claims based upon challenges to the agencies’ tracking systems and the frequency
13 of communications once Plaintiffs were placed in separate custody with ICE and ORR are 14 barred by the DFE. Prior to the DHS Referral Policy, there were processes and systems in 15 place and previously utilized to capture family relationships, document when a separation 16 occurred, and record the basis for the separation. U.S. MSJ SOF 31. Prior to 17 implementation of the DHS Referral Policy, system enhancements were made to U.S.
18 Border Patrol’s “e3 system” to provide additional methods for capturing family
19 relationships and documenting separations. See U.S. Contr. SOF 10, 11. Plaintiffs claim 20 that these existing systems and processes were not up to the task of dealing with a larger 21 volume of separations, but that is essentially a claim that the government should have taken
22 a different policy approach. Decisions relating to processes and systems for tracking 23 individuals in federal custody (which, in this case, involved the custody of multiple 24 agencies) are the sort of policy-based decision-making protected by the DFE. See U.S.
25 MSJ 12-13; see also Campos v. United States, 888 F.3d 724, 733 (5th Cir. 2018)
26 (deficiencies in computer database system that failed to reveal immigration status protected

27 ¹⁸ Specifically, with respect to the documentation of the family relationships and 28 separations, see U.S. MSJ SOF 46-48, 51 (for C.M. and B.M.); 66-68, 71 (for L.G. and B.G.); 81-83, 89 (for M.R. and J.R.); 99-101, 108 (for O.A. and L.A.); and 117-119, 124
(for V.C. and G.A.).

by discretionary function exception); Cruz v. United States, 684 F. Supp. 2d 217, 224 (D.P.R. 2010) (dismissing claim that VA negligently designed and maintained inadequate computer systems and safeguards).¹⁹

Further, Plaintiffs' claims that challenge the frequency of communications during separation similarly are barred by the DFE. Because the enforcement actions taken pursuant to the DHS Referral Policy that resulted in Plaintiffs' separations are covered by the DFE, the manner in which those separations were carried out, such as the degree of communications with and about their children, must also be protected. See Sloan v. H.U.D., 236 F.3d 756, 762 (D.C. Cir. 2001) (claims that are "inextricably tied" or "inextricably linked" to the conduct protected by section 2680(a) are also barred). Even if, however, a claim based upon such communications could be parsed out from Plaintiffs' separations, the DFE nevertheless bars Plaintiffs' claims based on allegedly insufficient communications while in custody. See S.E.B.M. v. United States, No. 1:21-cv-00095 --- F. Supp. 3d --- 2023 WL 2383784, at *16 (D.N.M. Mar. 6, 2023). When a parent is in ICE custody and a child in the care of an ORR facility, the frequency and duration of communications is inherently limited based on a number of factors, including the adult's secure detention setting (and, at various times, being moved to various ICE facilities during the pendency of their removal proceedings), and the need for such communications to be coordinated and scheduled in advance given the protocols in place for communications with children in the care of an ORR facility. See id. ("[I]mmigration detention involves unique security concerns that makes it difficult for detainees to be available for regular calls and thus flexibility is necessary."); U.S. MSJ Ex. F (De La Cruz Decl. ¶ 32).²⁰

¹⁹ As discussed in the United States' motion for summary judgment, inter-agency notice and planning occurred prior to adoption of the DHS Referral Policy, including several meetings with Secretary Nielsen; see U.S. MSJ SOF 10, 22, and there were pre-existing processes and practices related to all the various functions to be performed in carrying out the DHS Referral Policy, including establishing communications and reunification. Id. at 31. Further, guidance was provided regarding documentation of the family relationship and separation. Id. at 32, 33. Thus, it cannot be said that no efforts were made to plan and prepare for the DHS Referral Policy.

²⁰ Accord Washington v. Reno, 35 F.3d 1093, 1100 (6th Cir. 1994) (a detainee's right to telephone access is "subject to rational limitations in the face of legitimate

1 II. Plaintiffs Cannot Establish Claims for Intentional Infliction of Emotional
 2 Distress Under Applicable State Law

3 Plaintiffs' IIED claims also fail because they are based on the lawful exercise of the 4 federal government's law enforcement authority, which is privileged under state law. See
 5 U.S. MSJ 26-28. As discussed in the United States' motion for summary judgment, 6 Arizona law does not provide for an IIED claim arising out of a lawful arrest and 7 detention. See Savage v. Boise, 272 P.2d 349, 352 (Ariz. 1954); accord Mintz v. Bell Atl.
 8 Sys. Leasing Inter., Inc., 905 P.2d 550, 563 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995); Lerner v. John 9 Hancock Life Ins., No. cv-09-01933, 2011 WL 13185713, at *3 (D. Ariz. Mar. 21, 2011);
 10 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46, comment g. Plaintiffs therefore cannot as a matter
 11 of law satisfy the first element of their claim ("extreme and outrageous" conduct).
 12 Moreover, there is at a minimum a dispute of material fact regarding whether the United 13 States "intended to cause emotional distress or recklessly disregarded the near certainty
 14 that such distress would result." Johnson v. McDonald, 197 Ariz. 155, 160, 3 P.3d 1075, 15 1080 (1995). In sum, the asserted facts set forth by Plaintiffs in support of their claim for 16 IIED as a matter of law do not satisfy the required elements of the tort.

17 A. Law Enforcement Privilege Prevents Plaintiffs from Establishing "Extreme 18 and Outrageous" Behavior

19 Plaintiffs cannot satisfy the first element of their claim, as a matter of law, because 20 they challenge privileged law enforcement conduct. Plaintiffs must prove that the United 21 States engaged in behavior that "falls at the very extreme edge of the spectrum of 22 possible conduct." Watts v. Golden Age Nursing Home, 127 Ariz. 255, 258, 619 P.2d 23 1032, 1035 (1980). "Under this standard, even a defendant's 'unjustifiable' conduct does 24 not necessarily rise to the level of 'atrocious' and 'beyond all possible bounds of 25 decency' that would cause an average member of the community to believe it was 26 'outrageous.'" Matson v. Safeway, No. 12-8206, 2013 WL 6628257, at *4 (D. Ariz. Dec.

27 26 security interests" (quoting Strandberg v. City of Helena, 791 F.2d 744, 747 (9th Cir.
 28 1986)); see also Harrison v. Fed. Bureau of Prisons, 464 F. Supp. 2d 552, 559 (E.D. Va.
 2006) (the "provision of telephone services is a matter committed to its discretion that will not be second-guessed through an FTCA claim.").

17, 2013) (quoting Nelson v. Phoenix Resort Corp., 181 Ariz. 188, 199 (Ariz. App.1994)). As a matter of law, Plaintiffs cannot show that the government's exercise of its law enforcement authority meets the "extremely high burden of proof for demonstrating intentional infliction of emotional distress in Arizona." Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc., 366 F.3d 736, 747 (9th Cir. 2004). See also Demetrilias v. Wal-Mart Stores Inc., 917 F. Supp. 2d 993, 1012 (D. Ariz. 2013) ("The adjectives 'extreme' and 'outrageous' are not just for show; evidence of callousness or insensitivity will not suffice.").

Plaintiffs argue that "the government acted in an extreme and outrageous manner by . . . adopting a policy under which migrant parents and children would be separated[.]" Pls. MSJ 16. But they have not challenged the legality of the adult Plaintiffs' detention, and Arizona law does not permit IIED claims arising out of a lawful arrest and detention. See Savage, 272 P.2d at 352. The cases Plaintiffs cite in support of their argument are inapposite, as they do not involve behavior that is comparable to a lawful enforcement action taken pursuant to statutory authority.²¹ Instead, it is well-established that a plaintiff's IIED claim must be viewed in the specific context in which the conduct occurs, and that the conduct, even if it "would otherwise be extreme and outrageous, may be privileged under the circumstances." Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 (1965).

Moreover, however unwise the policy that led to family separations, that officials in the current Administration have denounced the policy choices reflected in the DHS Referral Policy cannot itself be a basis, as Plaintiffs suggest, see Pls.' MSJ 1-2 & n.1, to find that it was "extreme and outrageous" as a matter of state law, which categorically precludes IIED claims based on lawful arrest and detention.²² And insofar as there is any ²¹ See Pankratz v. Willis, 744 P.2d 1182 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1987) (case involving abduction of a child by former wife); Kajtazi v. Kajtazi, 488 F. Supp. 15 (E.D.N.Y. 1978) (case involving abduction of a child by former husband). Plaintiffs also cite to Carranza v. United States, No. 3:12-cv-02255, 2013 WL 3333104 (D. Or. July 1, 2013), where the court's decision to not dismiss the IIED claim turned, in part, on accepting as true the allegation that the plaintiff was placed under arrest for improper purposes.

²² Indeed, the statements pointed to by Plaintiffs are consistent with this Administration's clear condemnation of the DHS Referral Policy and expressions of regret for the consequences that ensued. See, e.g., U.S. MSJ at 1, 8. The United States does not defend the wisdom of those policy choices, but it is for the Court to determine

1 relevance to Plaintiffs' contention "that prosecution was simply a pretext for the 2 separation" (Pls. MSJ 9 n4), the record evidence concerning Secretary Nielsen's
 3 intentions precludes summary judgment in favor of Plaintiffs. See U.S. MSJ 24; U.S.
 4 MSJ SOF 18, 19.

5 Nor can Plaintiffs establish an IIED claim based on the timing of Border Patrol's
 6 request for an ORR placement for unaccompanied children. Pls. MSJ 18. As explained,
 7 the timing of the ORR placement decision was a discretionary law enforcement
 8 determination that implicated multiple policy considerations, including minimizing the 9 time that minors were forced to spend in Border Patrol custody. See supra at 10-12; U.S.
 10 MSJ 13-17.

11 Plaintiffs also contend that the manner of their separations at the Yuma Border
 12 Patrol Station was extreme and outrageous because they were performed "in an inhumane
 13 manner[.]" Pls. MSJ 17, 20. There is record evidence that controverts Plaintiffs'
 14 allegation, which at the very least creates a genuine issue of material fact as to the notice
 15 given to the Plaintiffs here and the conduct during separation.²³ Notably, Plaintiffs do 16 not bring a claim for battery. But in any event, these allegations are insufficient because 17 the separations were inextricably tied to lawful detentions shielded by law enforcement
 18 privilege. See supra at 17-18.

19 Likewise, the amount of information provided and the frequency and duration of 20 communications between the adult and minor Plaintiffs do not establish "extreme and 21 outrageous" conduct. The record evidence demonstrates that the adult and minor 22 Plaintiffs communicated while in separate custody, and the minor Plaintiffs also

23 whether the alleged behavior in question was, under the circumstances, "extreme and 24 outrageous" as a matter of law. For the reasons explained, such discretionary policy choices do not give rise to tort liability under the FTCA or state law.

25 ²³ For example, Border Patrol explained during the processing of the adult
 26 Plaintiffs and children that the children would be placed in separate custody, and 27 Plaintiffs acknowledge they were detained together for some time prior to the transfer.
 28 See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 6 (Comella 203-208); U.S. Opp. Ex. A At. 1(McAleenan 149);
U.S. Supp. SOF 3. There is also evidence controverting Plaintiffs' allegations of verbal mistreatment. See U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 6 (Comella 29-30, 43, 203-208, 229-233, 401- 402); U.S. Supp. SOF 5.

1 communicated with other non-detained family members.²⁴ A district court recently held
 2 in another family separation case that the limited and brief calls that occurred while the 3 adult and child were in separate custody were “reasonable” under the circumstances. See 4 S.E.B.M., 2023 WL 2383784 *16.

5 Finally, Plaintiffs base their IIED claims, in part, on the duration of their 6 separations. Pls. MSJ 21. However, the duration of their separations was a direct result
 7 of ICE’s exercise of its unchallenged statutory authority to maintain custody of the adult
 8 Plaintiffs pending immigration proceedings, which the DHS Referral Policy did not 9 constrain or otherwise change. U.S. MSJ SOF 31. Because the continued detention of 10 the adult Plaintiffs following the criminal process was expressly authorized by federal 11 statute, it cannot serve as the basis for an IIED claim under state law.²⁵

12 B. Plaintiffs Have Not Established the Element of Intent

13 Regarding the second element of the IIED claim, Plaintiffs contend that “the 14 government recklessly disregarded the near certainty that parents and children separated 15 under the Policy would suffer severe emotional harm.” Pls. MSJ 21. Plaintiffs cannot 16 prevail on summary judgment on this element for several reasons.

17 As an initial matter, Plaintiffs’ IIED claim is premised on the impermissible
 18 assumption that the United States can be found liable for conduct by “the government” as 19 a whole in planning, adopting, and implementing the DHS Referral Policy, when the 20 FTCA has only waived sovereign immunity for the acts of individual employees. The 21 ²⁴ Regarding the communication while in separate custody, see U.S. MSJ SOF 60

 22 (for C.M. and B.M.); 77 (for L.G. and B.G.); 95 (for M.R. and J.R.); 113 (for O.A. and 23 L.A.); and 131 (for V.C. and G.A.).

24 ²⁵ In arguing otherwise, Plaintiffs cite to cases applying a “shock the conscience”
 25 test on a motion to dismiss involving allegations accepted as true regarding allegedly 26 improper government motives, and lack of legitimate objectives in maintaining custody
 27 of parents separately from their children. See Pls. MSJ 18 n.7, 21. However, this case is 28 no longer at the motion to dismiss phase, and thus no longer requires accepting as true
 Plaintiffs’ allegations that the DHS Referral Policy lacked any permissible governmental objectives. See U.S. MSJ 17-20; U.S. MSJ SOF 18, 19. Moreover, Plaintiffs expressly state that their motion for partial summary judgment is predicated on the government’s alleged recklessness, not ill intent, see Pls. MSJ 2 n.1 & 8 n.3, making the cases upon which Plaintiffs purportedly rely all the more inapposite.

claimed facts are not material because they do not focus on the actual decision-maker: Secretary Nielsen. Pls. MSJ 3-5, 21-22.²⁶ Plaintiffs' only attempt to establish a disregard of emotional distress by Secretary Nielsen is based upon information contained in letters from various organizations, informing "the government" that separations of parents and child would cause harm. Pls. MSJ 5, 22. Plaintiffs have not established that those letters were actually received by Secretary Nielsen.²⁷

But even if this information (or the views contained therein) were brought to her attention, that is not a sufficient basis on which to grant summary judgment on this element. The assessment of an IIED claim must account for the context in which the claim arises. And here, the context involves a high-level federal law enforcement policy, where even the Plaintiffs have not challenged the legality of the adult Plaintiffs' detention under that policy. In that context, a host of factors must be weighed and accounted for, as with any law enforcement conduct. For that reason, privileged conduct cannot give rise to an IIED claim, even if the law enforcement actor "is well aware that [assertion of the privileged conduct] is certain to cause emotional distress." Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 cmt. g (1965). Moreover, here, there is evidence in the record that when the relevant decisionmaker (Secretary Nielsen) adopted the DHS Referral Policy, she considered a variety of factors, including the impact on families, ORR's established system of care of minors, the systems and processes already in place to facilitate communications, see U.S. MSJ SOF 10, 20, 42, and countervailing law enforcement, national security interests, resource considerations, and humanitarian concerns, U.S. MSJ SOF 11-14, 19; U.S. MSJ 11-12. In particular, there is record evidence that when she ²⁶ Specifically, Plaintiffs refer to letters from Congress and other organizations sent in March 2017 to then-Secretary Kelly, Pls. MSJ 3, 22, who left the position of Secretary over a year before the DHS Referral Policy was adopted; comments made by a U.S. magistrate in November of 2017, Pls. MSJ 4, to unspecified recipients and prior to the appointment of Secretary Nielsen; and letters from various organizations in December 2017 to the Acting DHS Inspector General, Pls. MSJ 4-5, 22.

²⁷ See U.S. Contr. SOF 14; U.S. Opp. Ex. A Att. 3 (DHS 30(b)(6) 275-277); U.S. Opp. Ex. B.

1 considered these factors, she had not understood there to be a near certainty that the 2 Referral Policy would cause severe emotional distress. U.S. Opp. Ex. B at 42-43.
 3 Accordingly, at a minimum, there is a genuine issue of material fact that would preclude 4 granting summary judgment to the Plaintiffs on this element.

5 Plaintiffs' assertion that the Border Patrol agents involved in the separations of 6 Plaintiffs acted with reckless disregard of the near certainty of severe emotional distress
 7 also fails. Pls. Opp. 22. For the reasons already noted supra, Border Patrol agents'
 8 transfers of Plaintiffs to separate custodial facilities is privileged. Further, Plaintiffs 9 cannot attribute reckless disregard to Yuma Border Patrol agents collectively, given that 10 the various tasks relating to processing, custody management, and detainee movement
 11 were handled by multiple agents, see U.S. Supp. SOF 15, the challenging circumstances 12 under which such agents were operating, see U.S. Supp. SOF 14 and supra at 13-15, and 13 the lack of information knowable to each agent regarding the duration of ORR custody,
 14 see U.S. Supp. SOF 3, 6. Moreover, as the United States has demonstrated, Yuma
 15 Border Patrol agents documented Plaintiffs' family relationships and separations to 16 facilitate tracking and communications as well as reunification once Plaintiffs were in 17 separate custodial facilities. See U.S. MSJ SOF 46-48, 51, 66-68, 71, 81-83, 89, 99-101, 18 108, 117-119, 124; see also U.S. Supp. SOF 3.

19 III. Plaintiffs Cannot Establish Claims for Negligence

20 Plaintiffs also seek to hold the United States liable for negligence, on the theory
 21 that "the government" breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by transferring the adult and 22 minor Plaintiffs to separate custodial facilities "in a manner that was unnecessarily 23 cruel", providing allegedly inadequate communications while in separate custody, and 24 allegedly lacking reunification plans. Pls. MSJ 23-26. Plaintiffs' negligence claim is 25 premised on privileged conduct under state law and is otherwise barred by the DFE. As 26 explained in the United States' motion for summary judgment, the DFE bars Plaintiffs'
 27 claims, and Plaintiffs cannot overcome that exception by alleging a constitutional 28 violation because they have not shown that the government violated a constitutional right

1 that was clearly established and specifically prescribed at the time of the alleged conduct.
 2 U.S. MSJ 23-26. But even if this Court concludes otherwise on the IIED claim,
 3 Plaintiffs' constitutional path around the DFE would not extend to their negligence claim.
 4 This is because a substantive Due Process Clause violation cannot be premised on 5 negligent conduct. See County of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833, 849 (1998).

6 In addition, Plaintiffs have failed to establish the elements of a negligence claim
 7 under state law. In order to maintain a negligence claim, "a plaintiff must prove four 8 elements: (1) a duty requiring the defendant to conform to a certain standard of care; (2) a 9 breach by the defendant of that standard; (3) a causal connection between the defendant's
 10 conduct and the resulting injury; and (4) actual damages." Gipson v. Kasey, 150 P.3d
 11 228, 230 (Ariz. 2007). Furthermore, a plaintiff cannot recover for the same conduct 12 under both a negligence theory and an intentional tort theory. "Any given act may be 13 intentional or it may be negligent, but it cannot be both. Intent and negligence are 14 regarded as mutually exclusive grounds for liability." Lewis v. Dirt Sports LLC, 259 F.
 15 Supp. 3d 1039, 1046 (D. Ariz. 2017).

16 As to their placements in separate custody, Plaintiffs do not dispute that they were 17 lawfully arrested and detained. Plaintiffs cite to no authority that Arizona law imposes a 18 duty to maintain a parent and child together in custody during the criminal referral or 19 prosecution process, or while the adult is being held in secure detention pendency federal 20 immigration proceedings. See E.L.A. v. United States, No. 2:20-cv-1524, 2022 WL
 21 2046135 *6 (W.D. Wash. June 3, 2022) (dismissing negligence claim because plaintiffs 22 could not identify duty under state law to maintain family unity during detention). The 23 only "duty" of family unity that Plaintiffs have pointed to throughout this litigation
 24 allegedly arises from the Constitution, not state law. But the Constitution cannot be the 25 source of an actionable duty in suits brought under the FTCA; rather, the duty must arise
 26 under state law. See FDIC v. Meyer, 510 U.S. 471, 478 (1994) ("[T]he United States . . .
 27
 28

1 has not rendered itself liable under [the FTCA] for constitutional tort claims.”).²⁸

2 Plaintiffs also seek to hold the United States liable for negligence based upon the 3 durations of their separations. See Pls. MSJ 25 (“the government . . . did not reunite them
 4 until required by court order to do so[.]” (emphasis added). In their motion, Plaintiffs
 5 appear to argue that the durations of their separations violated a standard found in CBP’s
 6 manual titled “National Standards on Transport, Escort, Detention, and Search”
 7 (“TEDS”), which states, among other things, that “CBP will maintain family unity to the 8 greatest extent operationally feasible, absent a legal requirement or an articulable safety
 9 or security concern that requires separation.” Pls. MSJ 25 n.10 (citing TEDS ¶¶ 1.9, 4.3).
 10 The TEDS manual is irrelevant, however, because Plaintiffs fail to establish that a duty
 11 exists in the first place under state law to maintain family unity while in detention. In any 12 event, Plaintiffs fail to establish that the duration of their separation violated the TEDS
 13 manual because it applies only to “CBP’s interaction with detained individuals,” see 14 TEDS at p. 3 (emphasis added). Here, the adult Plaintiffs were detained by ICE during 15 the pendency of their immigration proceedings; CBP thus played no role with respect to 16 the length of their detention.

17 Plaintiffs also fail to carry their burden of establishing the applicable standard of 18 care under which the Court would be required to assess the defendant’s conduct and any 19 alleged breach of the identified state law duty. See Ramirez v. Glendale Union High Sch.
Dist. No. 205, No. 03-0060, 2006 WL 8439630 *4 (D. Ariz. Sept. 20, 2006) (plaintiff did 20 not meet his burden of establishing the standard of care and therefore could not maintain 21 his state law negligence claim as a matter of law); Petty v. Arizona, No. CV-15-0133, 22 2018 WL 2220665, at *3 (D. Ariz. May 15, 2018) (granting summary judgment for 23 defendant where plaintiff failed to provide evidence of standard of care in custodial 24 setting); Harris v. United States, No. CV-19-0024, 2021 WL 2334385 (D. Ariz. June 8, 25

26 ²⁸ Indeed, cases arising from alleged breaches to a right to familial association
 27 treat such claims as constitutional claims. See, e.g., Keates v. Koile, 883 F.3d 1228,
 28 1236-38 (9th Cir. 2018); Daurio v. Arizona Department of Child Safety, No. CV-18-03299, 2020 WL 6940812 *3 (D. Ariz. Nov. 25, 2020).

1 2021) (“The burden is on a plaintiff to establish the applicable standard of care.”)
2 (quoting Kalar v. MacCollum, 496 P.2d 602, 604 (Ariz. 1972)). Plaintiffs have provided
3 no evidence regarding the standard of care (or breach thereof) under Arizona law with 4 respect to the timing and manner of Border Patrol’s request for ORR placement of the 5 minor Plaintiffs upon initiation of the prosecution referral process of the adult Plaintiffs 6 or carrying out a transfer of custody.

7 Finally, with respect to communications between the adult and minor Plaintiffs
8 while in separate custody, Plaintiffs argue that the applicable standard of care is supplied
9 by ICE’s Performance-Based National Detention Standard, Section 5.6(V)(E)(3), which 10 states that indigent detainees “may request a call to immediate family or others in 11 personal or family emergencies or on an as-needed basis,” and by the Flores Agreement, 12 which provides that children are to have “contact with family members who were 13 arrested with the minor.” Pls. MSJ 25 n. 10. Even assuming arguendo that these 14 provisions could supply the applicable standard of care under state law, Plaintiffs have 15 presented no evidence that either of these standards were not met. See S.E.B.M., 2023
16 WL 2383784 *16 (finding that the limited and brief calls that occurred satisfied these 17 provisions and were reasonable under the circumstances).

CONCLUSION

18 For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs’ motion for partial summary judgment should 19 be denied.
20

21 Dated: April 24, 2023

Respectfully Submitted,

23 BRIAN M. BOYNTON
24 Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General

25 JAMES G. TOUEY, JR.
26 Director, Torts Branch

27 s/ Phil MacWilliams
28 PHILIP D. MACWILLIAMS
Trial Attorney

1 D.C. Bar No. 482883
2 E-mail: phil.macwilliams@usdoj.gov
3 U.S. Department of Justice
4 Civil Division, Torts Branch
5 Benjamin Franklin Station, P.O. Box 888
Washington, DC 20044
Telephone: (202) 616-4285
6 Attorneys for the United States of America
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on April 24, 2023, I electronically transmitted the attached document to the Clerk's Office using the CM/ECF System for filing and transmittal of a Notice of Electronic Filing to all CM/ECF registrants.

s/ Phil MacWilliams
PHILIP D. MACWILLIAMS
Attorney for United States of America